Foolkit - Interior page detail

Being the principal of a small legal firm, Andrew Rogers knows how good business processes can help maximise the work time of his team. Managing a busy Southern Suburbs legal practice he recognises how every minute is precious to the operation of a successful practice.

Thanks to his interest in web development, Andrew has recently released a truly impressive online legal portal that brings together many of the online resources the legal profession would use each day. His online resource call Foolkit offers a thoroughly unique and rich online application that optimises your time when engaged in the plethora of searches and scanning within the Internet, that busy legal professionals do each day.

What began for Andrew as an extensive personal collection of professional legal resource links has finally morphed into a fully edited legal web portal with advanced search engine technology.

The Foolkit online project at - www.foolkit.com.au - has absorbed Andrew's spare time for close to two years. When I visited his practice recently he understandably was proud to show me how powerful - and yet simple - this web application can be, and how easy it was as a practical everyday legal tool for use by the public and the profession alike..

The free online portal has been launched to provide relevant local and Federal law content as well as many useful law tools and links all in the one convenient website and features specific features for both the legal profession section and the section for the general public.

Designed to make the practitioner's working day much easier, the tag-line is that "Foolkit is so easy that any fool could use it". When clicking onto foolkit.com.au the ease of navigation and connectivity of the whole site really does strike you. The two distinct public and professional sections are each edited precisely as they should.

When you visit the 'for the public' section; this area provides a myriad of pages of easily navigated information with more explanatory information and links catering for the needs of the general public in South Australia – all in plain clear language.

The 'for lawyers' section has been written for - and will be edited regularly by - lawyers to provide a concise collection of their most commonly used information, contacts and tools for legal practice in South Australia

"We devised Foolkit as a practical, easy-to-use resource, specifically for the South Australian legal market. Our aim was to consolidate pretty much any information or service that a local lawyer would need, and make it easily accessible from their workstation. Foolkit saves you time, it saves frustration and it saves you time," Rogers said.

Everything is clearly laid out at your fingertips, so you can find what you're looking for quickly. You can easily select to make Foolkit your homepage, so it'll always be there when you need it. Separate editions are being prepared for each state and territory.

Unlike many traditional reference tools, Foolkit can continually evolve to meet the changing needs of its users. Readers who wish to be kept informed of Foolkit's latest developments can subscribe to the Foolkit newsletter.

More will be announced shortly regarding Foolkit - so visit www.foolkit.com.au and give it a test-drive soon.
